GOT A QUICK SHAVE.

George Lehberger, of Johnstown, Comes to Pittsburg, and

LOSES A LONG, BLACK BEARD. Arrested and locked Up on Suspicion of Being an Anarchist.

HE IS WANTED IN CAMBRIA COUNTY George Lehberger spent last night in the sultry solitude of a Central station cell. George numbers among his other earthly possessions an air of mystery and a luxurant dark mustache. The heads of the police department claim that he is a blood loving Anarchist from Russia, and that he is an all-around bad man and a sympathizer and feilow countryman of Alexander Berkman, the would be assassin of H. C. Frick. On the other hand Lehberger and his friends insist that it is all a mistake, and that he is nothing more or less than an humble employee of the Cambria Iron Works, of Johnstown, and a muchabused man. Mr. Lehberger's trouble began shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning. happened in this way: yesterday morning a tall man with a sallow face and a bushy black beard made his way into the office of the Merchants Hotel, on Water street, and walked to the desk

Wanted to See Bergman, Addressing the clerk the stranger said:

"I want to see Bergman, the night clerk, Is he in?" The clerk informed the man with the black beard that Mr. Bergman was out and wouldn't be in until evening. The man with the beard left the ho tel and went into Kaufmanns' store. The stranger sauntered up to the hat counter and began to inspect the tall styles of head covering. Detective Sol Coulson entered the store at this juncture. He lounged up to the hat department and took a mental inventory of the stranger. Ten minutes later the stranger left Kauf-manns' and started down Wood street. Just before he reached Wood street he felt turning looked straight into the stern face of Detective Coulson.

"What do you want?" he asked,
"Come with me," was the detective's reply.

The stranger obeyed without a muruur, and in three minutes' time was ushered into police headquarters. Once safe in Superin-tendent O'Mara's office, Detective Coulson turned to his prisoner and in a stern voice Requested to Change His Face.

"Come, my man, change your face and do it quick."

The stranger's face grew red, and he muttered: "What the devil do you mean?"
"Take off that beard and tell me your Take on that beard and reply.

With a muttered imprecation the stranger clutched the end of his beard and gave it a sudden yank. The result was as unique as it was startling. The black haired man of 50 was transformed into a freshly shaven man of 30 with a big mustache and a dirty In response to the usual queries the stranger said: "My name is Lehberger-George Lehberger, and I've lived for the last four or five years in Johnstown. I am a draughtsman, and am employed by the Cambria Iron Works. I am no Anarchist, and my reason for disguising myself with the beard was to fool my brother-in-law, Otto Bergman, the night clerk of the Mer-ehants Hotel. I really don't know what you mean by arresting me, as I only intended this as a joke, and I am a man of peace." Be Was Well Armed, But a careful examination of Mr Leh. But a careful examination of Mr. Leh-berger's pockets revealed the fact that for a "man ef peace" he traveled well armed. In his hip pocket was found a very long and very ugly looking dirk knife and the inside pocket of his coat was a loaded revolver of the bull dog pattern. Close beside this weapon was a small bottle of hair dye. After he had been searched Lehberger was escorted to a cell, and a telegram was sent to the Johnstown authorities. While the detectives were waiting for an answer.

the detectives were waiting for an answer, Night Clerk Bergman called at headquar

"That man is my brother-in-law, and he lives in Johnstown. He is not an Anarchist, and I want him released." Just at this juncture a telegram was re-eeived from the chief of the Johnstown po-lice. It stated that Lehberger was wanted in Johnstown on a serious charge and that he should be held until the arrival of Johns-Has Some Acquaintance With Russia. On the strength of this telegram Leh-On the strength of this telegram Lehberger was taken to the Central station. Just before he was placed in the cell a crumpled card was found in his pocket. On the card was this address: "Charles Stader, Bieloretzker Iron Works, Government Orenburg, County Werchnerensky." After reading the address the police decided that their prisoner was a Russian Nihilist.

Late last night Bergman was interviewed at the Merchant's Hotel. "This man is my brother-in-law," he said "and has been for the past five years. He is no more an Anarchist than you are."

A telegram from Johnstown says: "George Lehberger, who was arrested in Pittsburg to-day, left this city suddenly on the morning of August 5, just in time to escape a charge of criminal assault, the warrant being sworn out by Charles Hoffman, uncle and guardian of little Jennie Hoffman. The and guardian of little Jennie Hoffman. The girl is not quite 15 years old, and the story sie told created a sensation. She is one of the flood victima. Her parents were drowned in the flood. Her sisters were sent to an orphan asylum in Philadelphia, but Jennie was taken to the house of Mr. and Mrs. Lehberger, who had no children of their own. She tells her story in a straightforward manner, and upon her statement her energian had a warrant issued but Lehber.

guardian had a warrant issued, but Lehber-ger left town before it could be served. Police Were Looking for Lehbarger. "Since that time Chief Richardson has been keeping a close watch on him, and had word yesterday that he left New Castle for Pittsburg. Lehberger is 33 years old and was born in Germany. He came old and was born in Germany. He came here some years ago. He worked at Beaver Falls and Pittsburg until some two years ago, when he came here and was employed by the Cambria Iron Company as a draughtsman, being a skilled employe. He was married some years ago to a good looking German woman named Fostick, who was recently divorced from her husband in Michigan, Labherger was always of a quiet div Lehberger was always of a quiet dis-position, was a close reader, and those with whom he was intimate declare that he had anarchistic tendencies and was known to become greatly excited when the Home-stead trouble was talked of.
